TO
SIR JOSEPH WALLIS O'BRYEN HOARE, BARONET,
OF SYDNEY, NEAR SOUTHAMPTON,
AS SENIOR MEMBER AND HEAD OF ALL THE FAMILIES OF THE NAME OF HORE AND HOARE,
This Volume,
DESCRIPTIVE OF THE FAMILY,
THE LABOUR OF MANY YEARS' RESEARCHES AND CARE,
IS AFFECTIONATELY INSCRIBED
BY HIS KINSMAN AND RELATIVE,
EDWARD HOARE.

Readers are particularly requested to strictly follow the lines, the capital letters, and the numbers in tracing the different members of the various families throughout the Volume.

Preface.

THE following account of the Early History and Genealogy of the Families of Hore and Hoare has engaged my attention for a large number of years, in consequence of a considerable number of very early deeds and documents of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, with other relics of the families, having come into my possession, and which have been the means of assisting me greatly in my investigations and researches, and guiding me into the proper paths for procuring much which otherwise might have been unnoticed and unknown.

I have during that period, I may say almost unassisted, amassed an immense amount of valuable and interesting information, at great labour, and much expense to myself, and which may prove also hereafter useful to future members of the families as well as to those now existing. I have therefore thought it a pity that all this information, obtained at so great care and labour, should be lost, as would most probably be the case, if unrecorded, when I shall have passed away; a genealogist seldom arising in a family, perhaps not even once throughout a century. I have therefore resolved on printing a limited number of copies, giving not only very full and copious pedigrees of all the various families and their different branches, but also interspersing it throughout, as far as space permitted me to do so, with anecdotes and incidents in the lives of many of the principal persons, and my authorities also for many of the transactions here recorded, thereby reviving the remembrance and the almost now forgotten memories of the past.

The volume is not published through any ancestral vanity or silly ideas, neither is it brought forth in hopes of profit or gain. Truth, and truth alone, has been my only object, my guiding star throughout, and in seeking it, I have gone to the fountainhead for every information, regardless of time, expense, or trouble. Nearly all such has been obtained from Legal sources and evidences, Public Records, Wills, Heraldic and Funeral Visitations, Family Deeds and Documents, Broad-sides, Parish Registers, Old Pedigrees, Manuscripts, Family Letters, and most of the best Periodicals, Journals, Magazines, and Papers of the times. I have discarded all hearsay tales, old women's gossip, and foolish fables, and sifted every thing with care, whilst quietly following my pursuits, and silently but thoughtfully "Wending on my way."

I now submit it to the various members of the different families herein interested, and to the public, and in so doing, with the hope that, like its collector and compiler, they may also find—

Nor rough nor rugged are the ways
Of Hoar Antiquity, but strewn with flowers!

EDWARD HOARE.

NEW YEAR'S DAY, 1883.

INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER.

THE name and family of Hore and Hoare is one of very great antiquity. The name is of Eastern origin, and signifies a boundary or mark. It is derived from the Armoric "Men-har," whence the Celtic "Mein-heir," a boundary stone, whence the Greek "opos," and the Latin "hora," an hour being merely a subdivision, a mark, and a boundary of time. All this will be more fully seen on referring to Mr. William Hamper's "Essay on Hoar-stones," memorial marks and boundary stones, published in the "Archæologia," volume xxv., and also separately (Birmingham, 4to, 1820). The word "hore" and "hoar" has also been used to designate the colour white, and has thus been used by Chaucer in his "Canterbury Tales," such signification having been derived from those ancient pillars and monuments of memorial and boundary—the Hoar-stones, they being universally hoary-headed, and white with age and antiquity. When the word "hore" (for this is its earliest spelling) was first assumed as a surname it is now impossible to decide. Some are inclined to suppose it was first so used during the Crusades, when surnames became general; but this is not so, as the name has been found in much earlier times. Others have ascribed it to Mount Horeb, the tribe of the Horites, the territory of La Hore, and even to the Egyptian Deity Horus; but all this is merely imaginary, and dealing too far back with the distance and darkness of long past ages. De Burgho derives the name from the town of Hore, and the Hore Abbey, situated near the rock of Cashel, in the county of Tipperary, founded about the year 1260.

In the time of King William the Conqueror, there was also a town of the name Hore in Hampshire, as mentioned in "Domesday Book" for that county; and at the same period there were lands, meadows, woods, etc., named Hora and Horam in the county of Suffolk, belonging to Robertus Malet, as may be seen by reference to the "Domesday Book" for that county.

Families of the name Hore have been found in very early times, and in records in England, Wales, and Ireland, the adjective "le" being very generally affixed thereto, as "le Hore;" they have also been found with the words "de la Hore," but not frequently, and in a few instances as "de la Hora."

I will now mention some of the earliest instances of families and persons of this name which have come under my immediate observation and researches, and also the various forms in which the name had been spelt, as Hore, Hora, Hoor, Hoore, Horre, Horey, Horrie, Horam, Horem, Hoar, and Hoare.

1. Alardus le Hore paid fines to King John, in A.D. 1208, for lauds in Muriel in "Com. Buckingham." ("Cap. dom. Westmin.")

2. Walterus le Hore held lands, in the year 1235, of King Henry III., in Leatherhead, in the county of Surrey, for the service of keeping a house in which to contain prisoners. (Manning's "History of Surrey," and "Placita Coronæ," 19th year of King Henry III.)

3. Robertus le Hore was living in London in 1331.

4. Walterus le Hore accompanied the Earl of Northampton, with a large number of nobles, knights, and other gentlemen of "qualitie," into parts beyond the sea, on the King's service, and had letters of protection and attorney from King Edward III., in the year 1337.

5. John Hoor had also similar letters from King Henry IV., in 1405, to accompany the King's son, the Duke of Lancaster. (Rymer's "Fœdera.")

6. The heiress of Hore of Gloucestershire married Henry de Clifford, Lord of Frampton, temp. King Henry IV.

7. John Hore was at the siege of Rouen, in the train of King Henry V.

8. Thomas Hoore, or Hore, was a Justice of the Peace for Southwark, in the year 1496.

9. The heiress of Hore of Marston, in Oxfordshire, married Unton Croke, son of Sir John Croke, the father of Sir Richard Croke. (See Burke's "Commoners," volume i., page 357.)

10. Another family of the name Hore was distinguished in the same county and also in Cambridgeshire, and possessed the Lordship of Elsefield, in the county of Oxford, and the Manors of Childerley magna and parva, Lulworth, Boxworth, and Magna Ravele, in Cambridgeshire; Wysshawe and Langley, in Warwickshire; and Barlee, or Hore's land, in Hertfordshire; and left Editha Hore its heiress, who married Thomas Fulthorpe, Esquire, of Barnard Castle; of this same house was Sir Nicholas Hore, Knight, who, about 1470, married Katherine, daughter of Sir Thomas Cotton, of Landwade, in Cambridgeshire, Knight. (See Clutterbuck's "Hertfordshire," Dugdale's "Warwickshire," and Burke's "Commoners," volume iv., page 712, and various other works.)

11. In Devonshire and Cornwall two ancient families of the name Hore flourished. From the former are descended the families of the two baronets of the name Hoare, which are given in the following pages, and which are supposed, with every probability of reason and truth, and by an early and well-supported tradition, to be descended from the very ancient family of Hore, of Pole Hore, in the county of Wexford, in Ireland, and previously from Pembroke, in Wales, as will be seen treated of here in an abridged form. The families of the name in Cornwall, in Hertfordshire, and Warwickshire, were not connected with the Devonshire or Wexford families, their armorial bearings being totally different. The pedigree and arms of the Cornwall family of Hore of Trenouth, in that county, will be found in the Heraldic Visitation for the county of Cornwall, taken in 1620, and among the Harleian Manuscripts in the British Museum. Their armorial bearings were, Azure, on a bend argent, three torteaux gules. It is a curious fact that though the word Hore is thus used throughout the entire pedigree, the last male member of the family, in 1620, signed the Visitation, spelling his name John Hoare, to which form it would appear he had then changed it. The Warwickshire family of Hore, of Elmedon, and elsewhere, ended early in co-heirs, married to Boteler, Hanslap, Pudsey, and others, as may be seen in Dugdale's "Warwickshire" (volume i., page 348, and volume ii., page 1001). Their armorial bearings were, Argent, a chevron gules, between three stags' heads cabossed of the last.

In Wales the family was of high distinction, as well as in England, where, says Verstegan, "I find many of this surname of good note and special regard, in many places of this kingdom." They held lands in the twelfth century in South Wales, after its conquest by the Normans, and acquired considerable estates in the adjoining shires and counties, holding high martial offices in the Marches of Wales, and serving as Sheriffs and representatives in Parliament for their counties and boroughs.

In the church of Digswell, in Hertfordshire, there is a very fine sepulchral brass to a Thomas Hore (thus spelt), a member of the Mercers' Company of London, with his wife Alicia, his four sons and eight daughters, all represented on the brass. It is dated March 20th, 1495, the period of his death. It was formerly over the grave in the nave of the church, but was removed, at the restoration of the building in the year 1814, within the rails of the Communion table, where it is now to be seen, with several other brasses. A description of it, with the inscriptions, will be found in Clutterbuck's "History of Hertfordshire," volume ii., page 325. A Thomas Hore, supposed to be one of his sons, was rector of Digswell, at the time of the decease of the member of the Mercers' Company, but which he resigned in the year 1497, June 1st, having been appointed thereto 13th of August, 1494, and no mention is made of any person of the name, in after times, in the parish records. In the books of the Mercers' Company of London there is only the date of the admission of Thomas Hore as a member of the Company, in 1457, and the name of the mercer, John Artone, to whom he served his apprenticeship. On the brass the armorial bearings, impaled with those of his wife, are the same as those of the Devonshire family.

In the church of Hayes, near Bromley, in the county of Kent, there is another brass over the grave of John Hoare, who was rector of the parish of Hayes, in Orpington, and who deceased in the year 1584, February 11th, aged 83 years, having been rector over 18 years. It is in rhyme, and in Old English black-letter characters. I give it here in full, as it is very quaint and curious:—

Who faine would lybe he must not feare to dye death is the waie
 That leades to lief and glorious Hoies that tribmphys ober Claie
 Come poore bewaile this want, Come friends lament & saie with me
 This man did dye to lybe, and lybes though dead his body be Full xviii peeres a Rector here he was, and then John Hoare
 Unwedd, deceast, one thousand peeres ffebe hundred eighty foure
 the xi daie of februarie when he had lybed lx score & thre.

This John Hoare was a member of the Devonshire family of Risford, near Chagford, but I am at present unable to say exactly to which particular branch of the family he belonged, as at this very period I find many of the name John Hoare scattered among different parts of England. There was formerly the figure of a priest in canonicals, a likeness and representing the deceased, over the inscription, but this was cut off and stolen for the sake of the old brass by some workmen, during the latter part of the last century when the church was undergoing repairs. In the "Journal of the Archæological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland," for the year 1881, will be found a full description of this interesting brass, communicated by me to that Society, at their meeting, March 3rd, 1881, volume xxxviii., pages 229, 230, and 231.

There are many early Wills of members and persons of the names Hore and Hoare in the Prerogative Office of Doctors' Commons, in Somerset House, London, a large number of which I have examined, and whence I have obtained much information. I here give the dates and names of those from the middle part of the fifteenth to the end of the seventeenth century.

Many of the name Hore sat as Members of Parliament in early times for various Counties and Boroughs in England. I give the names of those, as taken from the writs, now preserved in the Hanaper Office, London.

29th Year of King Edward I., 1300-1301.

Radulphus le Hore, for Milborne Port Borough, Somersetshire.

8th Year of King Edward III., 1333-4.

Thomas le Hore, for the County of Kent.

12th Year of King Edward III., 1337-8.

Stephanus le Hore, for Dorchester Borough, Dorsetshire.

22nd Year of King Edward III., 1348.

Stephanus le Hore, for Dorchester Borough, Dorsetshire.

8th Year of King Richard II., 1384.

Willielmus Hore, for the County of Rutland.

8th Year of King Henry V., 1420.

Willielmus Hore, for the City of Chichester, County of Sussex.

9th Year of King Henry V., 1421, 31st of March.

Johannes Hore, for Bridport Borough, Dorsetshire.

9th Year of King Henry V., 1421, 10th of November.

Johannes Horey, for the County of Dorset.

3rd Year of King Henry VI., 1425, 29th of March.

Johannes Hore, for the County of Cambridge.

9th Year of King Henry VI., 1430.

Willielmus Hore, for the City of Chichester, County of Sussex.

15th Year of King Henry VI., 1436-7, 22nd of November, 1436.

Gilbertus Hore, for the County of Cambridge.

7th Year of King William III., 1695, 23rd of October.

Roger Hoar, merchant, for Bridgwater Borough, County of Somerset.

10th Year of King William III., 1698, 25th of July.

Roger Hoare, Esquire, for Bridgwater Borough, County of Somerset.

A new election took place, 29th of November, 1699, for Bridgwater Borough vice Roger Hoare, Esquire, deceased.

Having given these particulars so far, which, indeed, I might have increased very largely, respecting early members of the name and various families, I now proceed to give the pedigrees of the different families of the names Hore and Hoare, with their branches, with which I am myself connected, and from which I am directly descended.

EDWARD HOARE.

Pedigree of Hore and Hoare.

THE Founder of this Family was Robertus Hore, who, about 1330, married an heiress of the family of Fforde of Chagford in the county of Devon. A very ancient and well-grounded tradition existed, well known in very many branches of the family long separated by time and distance, and supported also by early pedigrees and manuscripts, that he was a younger brother of William Le Hore or Thomas Le Hore, of Pole Hore in the county of Wexford, whose ancestor, Sir William Le Hore, was one of the fifty knights who, during the reign of King Henry the Second, went over from Pembroke in Wales, with Maurice Fitz Gerald, Robert de Barry, Robert Fitz Stephen, and others, for the conquest of Ireland, and to whom the estate of Pole Hore and other lands in the county of Wexford were granted by Strongbow, and which still remain in the possession of his lineal descendant, the present Philip Herbert Hore, Esq., of Pole Hore. (See the pedigree of that family in Burke's "Commoners," vol. iv., pp. 712-716.)

The tradition states that this Robertus Hore was an extremely fine and handsome man, who went over to Devonshire to seek his fortune, and while there won the heart and the affections of the heiress of Fforde of Chagford, and having married her settled there, and thus became the Founder of the family. The armorial bearings of both families are in perfect accordance with this tradition, for an old manuscript of the fourteenth century states thus: "Sir William Le Hore was one of the fifty knights who went over from Pembroke in Wales for the conquest of Ireland, and at the siege of Wexford he was the standard-bearer, and bore the Standard of the Eagle, wherefore in commemoration of such he was given the eagle with expanded wings as his armorial insignia; he was also called the White Knight, in allusion to his name Hore, some suppose from his fair appearance, others say from his suit of white armour, the word hore then signifying the colour white." The Devonshire family of Hore had for their armorial bearings the eagle with expanded wings, with two necks, within an engrailed bordure; these marks in Heraldry are frequently found given to a junior branch of a family still existing in its senior members and lines.

1	B	C
1 John Hore, Barrister- at-Law, of the Middle Temple, London. Died un- married.	2 James Hore, or Hoare, Surveyor, Warden, and Controller of the Mint. (See Roger Ruding's "Annals of the British Coinage," vol. i., pp. 29, 37, 47, and 48, for the dates of his various appointments in the Mint.) He was also the founder of Hoare's Bank, about 1646, at the sign of the Golden Bottle in Cheapside. (See the "Little London Directory" for 1677.) He was also Banker to Oliver Cromwell. He died at Edmonton, county of Middlesex, the 30th of November 1696, and was buried in the interior of the Church of St. Peter's ad Vincula, in the Tower of London, on the 5th of December 1696. Henry Hoare—son of Sir Richard Hoare, first Knight, and both then partners in the Bank, and his cousin—was the administrator of his effects, as he died without a will. He was twice married, but had no issue by his second wife. She was Ann Wakefield, widow of John Wakefield, Merchant, of Austin Friars in the City of London, having had by her first husband four daughters, co-heiresses, with large estates in Essex and Cambridgeshire—the eldest, Dame Elizabeth Neville; the second, Ann Bostock, a widow; third, Mary Wakefield, unmarried; and fourth, Sara Wakefield, who married James Hoare, his son by his first wife, as see below. By his first wife (name doubtful) he had one son and two daughters.

James Hoare, Barrister-at-Law, of the Middle Temple, London. Admitted June 1st 1663, as son and heir-apparent of James Hore (ex turre), of the Tower, London, Esq. He married (marriage licence dated 23rd November 1668, he being then 26 years of age) Sara Hannah Wakefield, of Nerendon in the county of Essex, she being then about 31 years of age. He was buried, vita patris , 25th August 1679, at the Church of St. Peter's ad Vincula, in the Tower of London. He had one child, James Charles Hoare, baptized at St. Peter's ad Vincula 23rd January 1672-3, but who died an infant. As James Hoare, like his father, also died without a will, his widow, Sara Hoare, administered as his executrix. (See Gwillim's "Heraldry," fifth and sixth editions.)	Dorcas Hoare, second wife to Sir John Ashfield of Netherhall in the county of Sussex, the 2nd Baronet. He died in 1684, by whom no issue.	Anne Hoare, wife of Sir John Ashfield of Netherhall in the county of Sussex, the 3rd Baronet, son and heir, by his first wife, of the before-mentioned Baronet. He left a daughter only, dying in 1727, and the Baronetcy then became extinct. (See Burke's "Extinct Baronetage.")

Edward Hore, or Hoare, of Togher Castle, near Dunmanway, in the county of Cork. Captain, afterwards Major, in Cromwell's Army. Went over to Ireland in 1649 with Ireton's Army. Got a grant of extensive territory, in conjunction with his brother Lieutenant Abraham Hoare, of the same Army (grant confirmed in 1667), amounting to 3468 acres, situate near Dunmanway, county of Cork. He married Mary Woodcock, only daughter and eventually heir of John Woodcock, Esq., of Kilrogane in the county of Kilkenny. He died at Cork 3rd July 1690, and she died at the same place 27th August 1690. In her will, dated in 1659, she mentions her children Edward, Enoch, Elizabeth, and Esther, and calls her husband as Edward Hore.

(Continuation, Pedigree A.)

4 | Abraham Hore, or Hoare. Lieutenant in the Army. Went over to Ireland with Ireton's Army in 1649, where he obtained large grants of lands near Dunmanway in the county of Cork, in conjunction with his brother, Captain Edward Hoare, as aforesaid. He died there, in the city of Cork, in 1670, unmarried. His will was dated 19th February 1669, proved 9th May 1670; in which he mentions his brother Edward Hoare, then Major in the Army.

5 | Thomas Hoare. In the Army. Lieutenant in the regiment of foot raised by the Committee of the Guildhall, London, in 1642, for the Irish Expedition, and under the command of Philip, Lord Wharton, Baron of Scarborough, and Lord General of Ireland. Was unmarried.

6 | Charles Hoare. An Officer in the Mint under his brother, James Hoare. Married Elizabeth Hinson of Devonshire. She was bur. in the graveyard of St. Peter's ad Vincula, in the Tower of London, Nov. 19th 1673.

7 | William Hoare. In Holy Orders. D.D. Chaplain of St. Saviour's Church, Southwark. Died unmarried February 9th 1687-8, aged 49 years. Buried in the Ladye Chapel of St. Saviour's Church, Southwark, where his tomb, with the armorial bearings of the family, is still to be seen. Several members of the Gilpin family (including some of his mother's) were buried in the same tomb, and recorded on the stone.

8 | Catherine Elizabeth Hoare. Married Captain Edward Wight of Edmonton, and of Cromwell's Army, who went over to Ireland in 1649, with Ireton's Army, and got a grant of land there, and settled in Limerick, of which city he was Mayor in the year 1694, and also in 1711, having been Sheriff in 1676. He issued a copper token with his name thereon during the year of his first mayoralty, when small money was scarce, an engraving of which, from a specimen in my possession, may be seen in Lindsay's "Coinage of Ireland." For continuation of his pedigree, see Burke's "Commoners," vol. iii., pp. 204-8. He died in 1713.

5 | Henricus Hore. Born in 1608 (ætatis 12 in 1620). From this Henry Hore, or Hoare, the families of Hoare, Bankers, of Fleet Street, and the Baronets (1786) of Hoare of Barn Elms in the county of Surrey, are descended. He married a Buckinghamshire lady (said to have been an heiress), and settled there, near Walton, as an extensive farmer. His eldest son, Henry Hoare, went to London, and there settled. Le Neve, in his "Knightage," p. 481 (printed by the Harleian Society from the original early document in the British Museum, among the Harl. MSS.), says, "He was a dealer in horses in Smithfield, and made four hundred pounds a year by buying and selling horses." His only son, Richard, afterwards the first Knight, was partner in the Bank at the Golden Bottle in Cheapside with James Hoare, his cousin, who founded it, and after the death of James Hoare, in 1696, to whom Richard's son Henry was executor, he succeeded to the entire business, and removed the Bank and the Golden Bottle also, a little previous to the year 1700, to Fleet Street, where the original Golden Bottle may now be seen over the doorway.

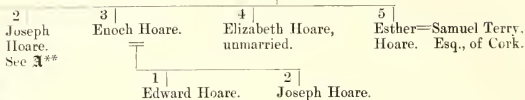

(Continuation, Pedigree 33.)

6 | Radulphus or Ralph Hore. Born in 1614 (ætatis 6 in 1620).

7 | Margareta Hore.

PEDIGREE A. (See page 8.)

Edward Hore, or Hoare. = Mary Woodcock.

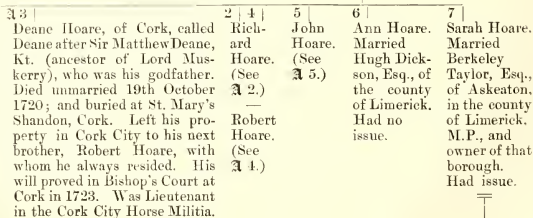

A 1 |

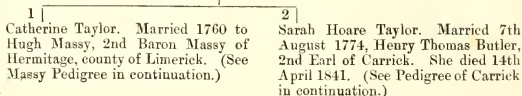

Edward Hoare, Esq., of Dunkittle, and Factory Hill, co. = Sarah Burnell, eldest daughter and coheirress of Colonel Richard Burnell, of Dublin and Garranes, co. of Cork. Married at St. Finbar's Cathedral, Cork, 25th March 1676. Buried at St. Mary's Shandon, Cork, 6th October 1715, having had five sons and two daughters.

Edward Hoare, Esq., of Dunkittle, and Factory Hill, co. = Sarah Burnell, eldest daughter and coheirress of Colonel Richard Burnell, of Dublin and Garranes, co. of Cork. Married at St. Finbar's Cathedral, Cork, 25th March 1676. Buried at St. Mary's Shandon, Cork, 6th October 1715, having had five sons and two daughters.

7th of the same month, in a vault under the church, which he had prepared for his family at the rebuilding of the church. In the Southwell MSS. in the British Museum there are several interesting letters from him, asking for protection-orders and escort to return home, written from Waterford, where he had landed from England. He was also the first person who possessed and drove a coach-and-four in the city of Cork.

Edward Taylor, Esq., of Askeaton, for a long period M.P. for the same borough, to whom it also belonged. He married Miss Anne Maunsell, and died, leaving only two daughters, coheirresses.

Grace Burton, second daughter of Benjamin Burton, Esq., Banker of Dublin; M.P. for Dublin in 1703; and Lord Mayor in 1706. Married 1703. Died 8th August 1709. Interred at St. Mary's Shandon, Cork. (1st wife.)

Edward Hoare, Esq., of Dunkittle, Factory Hill, etc., county of Cork; Sheriff 1708; Mayor 1710; M.P. for Cork City for seventeen successive years (1710 to 1727); was also elected for Bandon Borough; Counsellor-at-Law; Lieut.-Colonel of Cork City Horse Militia, commanded by the Honourable St. John Broderick. Died 20 July 1765, and buried in the family vault at St. Mary's Shandon. He was also a Banker and Merchant in Cork, and, in consequence of the capture and loss of a fleet and expedition he fitted out and was not insured, he was obliged to sell all his unsettled property. Dunkittle was sold to the Newenham family, and Factory Hill to his brother Robert Hoare.

Ann Grant, daughter of Thomas Grant, Esq., of St. Mary's Shandon. Married 27th Aug. 1715, at St. Mary's Shandon. (2nd wife.)

1 Edward Hoare, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Baptized 31st August 1704, at St. Mary's Shandon. Died, vitâ patris, 16th December 1740, and buried there, in the family vault, 19th December 1740 (as per Parish Register). Having joined with his father in the fitting out of a large mercantile shipping undertaking, and, in consequence of its loss (some say by capture, but others by a storm), and having refused to join in the sale of the settled property, he was arrested and sent to gaol in Cork, where he shortly after was attacked by fever, which proved fatal. His wife was then large with child, and it is believed a fine boy was born in due time, but regarding which strange stories were told, now lost in forgetfulness, in the lapse of many years and new generations. I have, however, been able to rescue from total oblivion the principal portions of them, and the Doctor MacConey's transactions.

Robert Hoare of Bachelor's Quay, now Grenville Place, city of Cork, and of Factory Hill, county of Cork, by purchase from his eldest brother, Edward Hoare (as see before). Factory Hill, formerly Killeoolishell, and West Ballyhinny was the forfeited estate of Andrew Morragh, attainted, and was purchased by Alderman Edward Hoare of Cork and Dunkittle for £770 at the Sale of the Forfeited Estates, 31st May 1703. Enrolled 7th July 1703. Killeoolishell consisted of 160 acres, 2 roods, and 24 perches; and West Ballyhinny of 51 acres. A quit rent of £3 10s. 7d. is payable to the Crown. It was called Factory Hill from the ruins of an old factory belonging to a Mr. Hall, of the period of Queen Elizabeth, now resembling the ruins of an old castle, beautifully covered with ivy. It is charmingly situated on the north side of the river Lee, four miles east of Cork City. (See the Conveyances of the Forfeited Estates in 1688, Annual Report, page 353.) Robert Hoare was Town Clerk, Clerk of the Crown, and Clerk of the Peace for the City of Cork; was also Cornet in Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Hoare's Troop of Horse, in the regiment of the Militia, of the City and Liberties of Corke, commanded by the Honourable Saint John Broderick. Commission dated 17th September 1715. Edward Hoare, Ensign in the North Cork County Militia 21st May 1797; Lieutenant 12th Dec. 1799; and Captain 23rd August 1803. J.P. for the county of Cork. Born at Cappavarna, in the county of Galway, 27th April 1782. Died of Asiatic Cholera, at Morrisou's Hotel, Dawson St., Dublin, on 21st August 1834, and was buried the same day at Saint Kevin's churchyard, Dublin.

Joined with his father in his debts, cut off the entails, and sold two portions of the estates to Colonel Gibbings and Warren Hastings Jackson, Esq., in the year 1814.

Married, by his cousin, the Reverend Edward Henry Hoare of Limerick, who was also trustee of his marriage settlement, on 15th December 1806, at Saint Anne's Church, Dublin, to Sophia Barry, second and youngest daughter and coheirress of Robert Barry, Esq., third and youngest son of Sir Edward Barry, first Baronet, Physician and Surgeon-General to the Forces in Ireland (who was M.P. for Charleville borough, county of Cork, 12th March 1743). Robert Barry was a Barrister-at-Law and King's Counsel, of Hume Street and Merriion Street, Dublin, and of Dalkey, county of Dublin. He was also M.P. for the borough of Charleville, in the county of Cork, 24th April 1761 and 12th July 1768. His first wife was Elizabeth Lyons, eldest daughter and coheirress of Henry Lyons, Esq., of River Lyons in the King's county, M.P. for that county for a long series of years, and J.P. and Deputy Governor, and who married Anna Rochfort, youngest daughter of George Rochfort, Esq., of Gaulstown, in the county of Westmeath, M.P. for that county (by his wife the Lady Elizabeth Moore, daughter of Henry Moore, third Earl of Drogheda), and sister of Robert Rochfort, first Earl of Belvedere. Robert Barry married secondly Elizabeth Guillelmine La Touche, only daughter of James Diques La Touche, Esq., of Bellevue, county of Wicklow, but by her had no issue.

Sophia Hoare, my dearest mother (by whom and by her mother also, both coheirresses, I am entitled to quarter over one hundred coats of arms, among them the Royal Arms of the House of Plantagenet), died at Factory Hill 5th March 1823, and was buried at Rathcooney churchyard on the 8th of the same month. She was the best of Mothers and of women; to her, and her alone, I owe everything; and during life I have ever cherished her memory with the purest affection, love, and gratitude.

 Married, first, — William Barry Hoare. Born at Limerick 14th March 1810. Is a Solicitor and Attorney; now of Moneens, near Bandon, in the county of Cork; formerly of Monkstown, county of Cork. The history of the life and career of this exquisite and interesting specimen of humanity is in preparation, far advanced towards completion, and will be shortly published, as a guide and caution to posterity. In the mean time parties interested are requested to examine the Prerogative Office for Wills, Dublin; the Deeds Registry Office; and the Proceedings of the Irish Court of Chancery, "Hoare v. Hoare," 1854, 1855, and 1856, for the means and artifices used by this pink of propriety? fraternity? honour? and integrity? !!!

Married, secondly, on the 7th August, 1877, at Saint Stephen's Church, Dublin, Mary Anne Hawkes, second wife and widow of Zechariah Cornock Hawkes of Moneens, near Bandon, county of Cork, and daughter of John Hawkes Harris of Cork. She was the aunt-in-law of his first wife (Mary Anne Pratt, whose mother was sister of Z. C. Hawkes), and therefore she is now grand-aunt and stepmother to W. B. Hoare's daughters. Talk of a deceased wife's sister's connection! What is it compared with this hitherto unheard-of alliance? There has been no issue by this second marriage. The Lord be praised! If there had been, it would have been a puzzle for genealogists to describe the relationships!!!

PEDIGREE B. (See page 9.)

I now proceed to describe the Genealogy of the different families descended from Henry Hore, or Hoare, the fifth son of William Hore of Ristford in Devonshire, and his wife Catherine Nott, as before stated at page 9.

This Henry Hoare, on the sale of the Devonshire property, and the dispersion of the family, removed to London with other members of the family. He appears to have been married in early life, name of his wife now lost, and to have died also a young man; very little has been ascertained regarding him, or his pursuits of life. He left two sons only. —

1	Henry Hoare. Married a Buckinghamshire lady (said to have been an only child), and settled, as an extensive farmer, near Walton, in Buckinghamshire, where he died, and was buried in the churchyard at Walton, 18th March 1654-5. His will, now in the Prerogative Office at Somerset House, London, is dated 11th July 1654, and was proved 17th May 1655. (See list of wills at page 4.) He had four sons and two daughters.	2	Olive (surname not known). She died in 1660, and was buried also at Walton churchyard.	Charles Hoare. Died before 1664, leaving three children, infants in that year.
---	---	---	--	--

1	Henry Hoare, removed to London, to the parish of Saint Botolph's, Aldgate. Le Neve, in his 'Knightage' (as before stated), says he was a dealer in horses, in Smithfield, which most probably was the fact, having been brought up to a country life. His will is dated 13th August 1664, and was proved 15th January 1669, having died in 1668. He had an only son.	Cecily (surname not known). Her will is dated 24th October 1674, and was proved 28th September 1679. (See list of wills at page 4.)
---	--	---

2	William Hoare. Was living in 1664. Married, and had issue a daughter, Elizabeth Hoare.	3	Thomas Hoare. Baptized at Walton 24th July 1631. Was living in 1664.	4	John Hoare. Was living in 1664.	5	Catherine Hoare. Married Samuel Sympson.	6	Olive Hoare. Married Joseph Brinklow.

Richard Hoare. Born in 1648. Became a partner in the Bank in Cheapside, at the sign of The Golden Bottle, founded by his cousin, James Hoare, as before given at page 8, and on the death of James Hoare, succeeded to the entire business in 1696, and shortly afterwards removed to Fleet Street, and made a large fortune. He purchased an estate at Staplehurst, in the county of Kent, which is still in the family. Was Sheriff of London, and Lord Mayor in 1713. Member of Parliament for the City of London 1710 and 1713; was knighted 29th Oct. 1710. Died at his residence at Hendon, county of Middlesex, 6th January 1718, aged 70 years, and was buried in a vault underneath the Church of Saint Dunstan's in the West, in Fleet Street, on the 13th of the same month, and in which church there is a tablet to his memory, and that of his wife, who was also there buried. There is a very curious broadside in the British Museum, and of which I have a copy also, "A Vindication of Sir Richard Hoare," from a charge made against him, 16th March 1707-8, of attempting to break the Bank of England, by causing a run on it for gold, and all done with only ten ten-pound notes, viz., one hundred pounds! Had eleven sons and six daughters.

Susannah Austin, daughter of John Austin, Esq., of Brittons in the county of Essex. Marriage Licence dated 27th July 1672. Died 24th Sept. 1720, aged 67 years.

1	Richard Hoare. Born 24th May 1673. Baptized 11th June same year, at the Church of Saint Mary's Woolnoth, in Lombard Street, London. Died at Bath, in 1720, and was buried at the Church of Saint Dunstan's in the West, in Fleet Street. Married first, Sarah Colston, daughter of Edward and Ann Colston, and niece of Robert Colston, Esq., by whom he had one son only, Richard Hoare, who died an infant. She died and was buried at Saint Dunstan's 10th March 1701.	A	He married, secondly, 10th July 1711, Mary Bolton, daughter and coheirress of William Bolton, Esq., of Charter House Yard, City of London. She also was buried at Saint Dunstan's Church. By her he had two sons and two daughters.

PEDIGREE C.

HOARE,

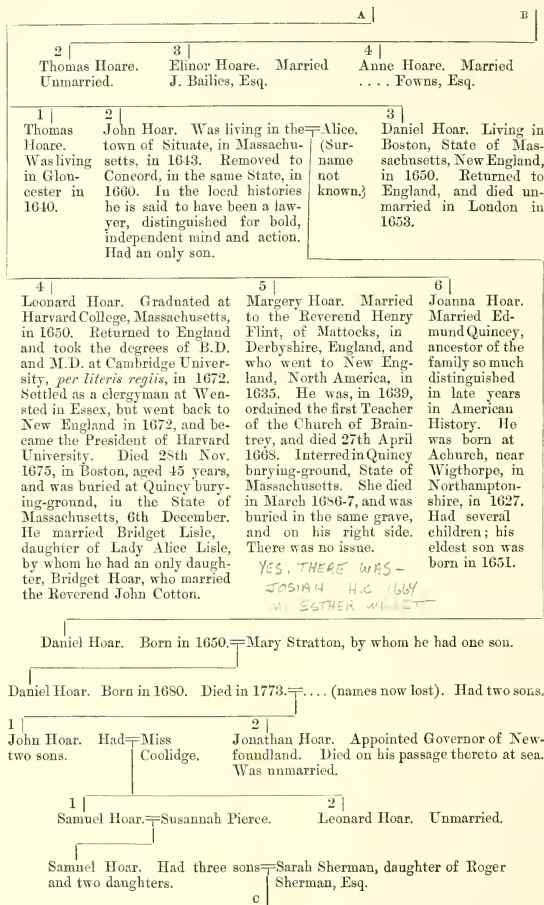

OF THE COUNTY AND CITY OF GLOUCESTER, AND AFTERWARDS OF MASSACHUSETTS, NORTH AMERICA.

In the commencement of the seventeenth century, a very influential branch of the Hoare family was settled in the county and city of Gloucester, and which family (there is not the slightest doubt) was descended from a junior branch of the family of Hore of Risford in Devonshire. Their armorial bearings were the same, but with a slight addition to the crest of the Gloucester family, viz., an eagle's head and neck erased, gorged with a bar gemelle. In the Heraldic Visitation for Gloucestershire, among the Harleian Manuscripts in the British Museum, the crest of the family is given, and that only. There is no pedigree or account of the family; but as the descendants of that family are in existence at present, and in very influential positions, settled in the State of Massachusetts, North America, I am enabled, through the kindness of my good and kind friend, the Honourable George Frisbie Hoar, the present Senator for Massachusetts, to give the pedigree of the family, and to add to it much also from my own researches.

Charles Hore or Hoare, of Frampton-on-Severn, near Gloucester. Married Anne Clifford, of that place. She was of the same family as Lord De Clifford, and was an heiress, for in the Church of Frampton-on-Severn, where they were buried, and near where they had resided, there is some stained-glass in the windows, of a very old date, representing the Hoare arms, quartering those of Clifford. This Charles Hoare was the first settler in Gloucestershire, and came from Devonshire, being a member of the family of Hore of Risford in that county, but from what branch has not yet clearly been ascertained. He had two sons and two daughters. He was succeeded by his eldest son. =

1 | Charles Hoare, Esq., Sheriff of Gloucester in 1634. His Will is dated 25th September 1636. (See list of Wills page 4.) Administration was granted to his widow, Joanna Hoare, 20th December 1638. In it he mentions his brother Thomas Hoare, and his sister Elinor Baillies, also his brothers-in-law, William Hinkesman, Walter Hinkesman, Edward Hinkesman, and Thomas Hinkesman, also his sister Fowns. He bequeaths to his wife Joanna Hoare £350; to his son John Hoare £200; to his son Daniel Hoare £150; to his daughter Joanna Hoare £100; to his son Leonard Hoare £100, to be kept at school, and afterwards sent to Oxford. To his daughter Margery Matherne my goods at Thornbury, and to his son Thomas Hoare £20. His lands at Encombe, Presbury, and Slimbridge to maintain my wife and the four children. Shortly after the death of Charles Hoare, all the before-mentioned children (except the eldest son, Thomas Hoare), went to New England, North America, with their mother, Joanna Hoare, and there settled at Braintree, and are all mentioned afterwards in the will of Leonard Hoare. On the family going to America, they omitted the final letter "e" in their name Hoare, and have ever since continued that manner of spelling their name, viz., Hoar. A

Joanna Hinkesman of Gloucester. She was in New England, with her children, about 1640, or perhaps a little earlier, and afterwards joined the Nonconformists. She died at Braintree, State of Massachusetts, 21st December 1671, and was buried at the Quiney burying-ground in that State. Had four sons and two daughters. B

The Armorial Bearings of the Family of Hore of Risford, in Devonshire, were, "Sable, an eagle displayed with two necks, within a bordure engrailed, argent." However, on the 17th December 1776, Henry Hoare, Esq., of Stonrhead, in the county of Wilts, had his Armorial Bearings exemplified, and registered in the College of Arms, London, and an addition was then made thereto of an ermine spot to both the Arms and the Crest. No members of the family should bear the ermine spot on either the Arms or the Crest, except those directly descended from the second Sir Richard Hoare, Knight, Lord Mayor of London in 1745, to whose descendants alone this grant extended. All other members of the families, excepting those, should bear the old Armorial Bearings of the Devon family, as above stated. Sir Richard Colt Hoare deplotes such, as see in his Memoirs of the Families, pages 53 and 54. There is no doubt it was done through a bit of vanity, the ermine spot being a mark of nobility; but, by so doing, it made the Armorial Bearings of the branches of the same family different, which Sir Richard Colt Hoare very properly states should not have been done.

The Crest of the Family of Hore of Risford, Devon, was, "On a wreath of the colours, a deer's head and neck proper erased argent." I find, however, in later times, some of the family bearing two Crests, viz., as the dexter crest, the deer's head, as above given, and as the sinister crest, "On a wreath of the colours, an eagle's head and neck proper erased argent." I have the bookplate of Henry Hoare, of London, second surviving son of Sir Richard Hoare, the first Knight, and partner with him in the Bank in Fleet Street. It bears the two Crests—the deer's head as dexter, the eagle's head as sinister; and underneath the Arms the words, "Henry Hoare, Goldsmith, London, 1705." The old motto of the Devon family was, "DATUR HORA AMORI." As a canting and punning motto upon the words, it is very good. In addition to the mottoes given in the plate of the Armorial Bearings facing the title-page, I find some members of the family bearing the following mottoes, taken, no doubt, from their not having known the real and early mottoes of the family, viz., "Recti cultus pectora roborat," and "Semper alans, neque sedens," and "Constanter." The Armorial Bearings of the family will be found given in Gwillim's 'Heraldry,' 5th and 6th editions. In the former edition the colours were erroneously given—argent was given instead of sable, and sable instead of argent. In the 6th edition this was rectified. In Logan's 'Titles of Honour and Nobility,' among the plates of the Esquires, the Hoare Arms are emblazoned, engraved, and fully given. This work is generally bound up, and added to the 5th edition of Gwillim's 'Heraldry.' In it also the colours have been erroneously reversed.

The early Armorial Seal (see engraving at page 7), once belonging to the Hore Family of Risford, Devonshire, is now in my possession. It is formed of a base silver precisely of the same character as the base silver coins of King Henry the Eighth, of the same period. It bears on the facet the date 1517, the upper limb of the numeral 7 being turned in the wrong direction. It has also on the upper portion the letters E H engraved thereon. I am inclined to think that this was done at a later period than the date. We know of no person bearing these initial letters at the time, though there may have been junior members who did so; but I am inclined to believe that some alteration was made from some other letter than the first, as now on the seal.

The old Devonshire property belonging to the Family of Hore of Risford, now belongs to the Reverend Hayter Hames, the Rector of Chagford, who purchased it from the Earl of Portsmouth. The word Risford became in time changed to Rishford, and again afterwards to Rushford, which is the present name. The Reverend Mr. Colby, who edited the 'Devonshire Visitation' for the Harleian Society, has read it from the manuscript as Rifford. This is wrong; he has mistaken the long f for the letter f. The former residence of the Hore family is now the Rushford Mill; and the residence of the Whyddon family, Whyddon Hall, close by, the seat of one of the then Justices of England, is now the Red Lion Public-house! How true the words of Ovid: "Tempora mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis." The Hore family, for many generations, were buried in Chagford Church, on the left-hand side of the Communion Table.

In examining the Burial Register of the Church of Saint Peter's ad Vincula in the Tower of London, I met, as buried there, 19th August 1682, the name of Martin Hore. I felt confident that he was a member of the family, but searched afterwards in vain for any record or memorial of him, having accounted for every other person of the family and name mentioned in that Register as there interred. However, while these pages were passing through the press, unexpectedly, while seeking information on a totally different subject, I discovered who he was. He was the son of Bartholomew Hore of the city of Exeter, who was married to a Miss Martin of that place, and no doubt he was named Martin after his mother's name. This Bartholomew Hore of Exeter was one of the witnesses to the will of William Martin, the Recorder of Exeter, made 18th Sept. 1610, and no doubt a relative of his wife. Though at present I have no direct proof, I have every reason to believe that this Bartholomew Hore was the son of David Hore, as mentioned at page 7. There is every probability also that his son Martin Hore held some appointment in the Tower, and perhaps procured for him by the influence of his relative James Hoare of the Mint.

Bankers were formerly termed "Goldsmiths, who keepe running Cashes." See the 'Little London Directory' for the year 1677, where the name of James Hore, at the sign of the Golden Bottle, in Cheapside, will be found among them. In those days houses were single and detached from each other, and not numbered, as at present, but each was known by a particular sign. Cheapside was the great resort of the Goldsmiths, or Bankers, at that period; every house, except one, was occupied as such during the reign of King Charles the First.

I am truly astonished how so excellent an antiquary as Sir Richard Colt Hoare was so well known to have been, could have styled the Golden Bottle as a "Barrel," which he has done in his Memoirs of the Family, in a note at page 20. "Ye Olde Leather Bottell" was a well-known London sign, but which, when gilded, became the "Golden Bottle." There is another Golden Bottle, formerly the Leather Bottle, over a Public-house in Leather Lane, off the Holborn, and still called "The Leather Bottle." It is exactly like the Golden Bottle over the doorway of the Bank in Fleet Street, but of a very much larger size. It has been gilded also of late years.

Sir Richard Colt Hoare does not appear to have known who James Hore or Hoare, the founder of the Bank, really was. He terms and calls him the youngest son of a Ralphe Hore of Saint Botolph's parish, who was only a cooper, and in very poor circumstances. I have read his will on several occasions in order to verify everything, and I am confident he was in no way whatever connected with the Radulphus Hore of Devonshire. He had three sons, Thomas, John, and James, and he leaves them "tenne pounds each," and to his daughter Barbara "twentie pounds," his other goods to his wife Mary. More than half his will is taken up with his religious views and his belief in the Almighty. James Hore, the founder of the Bank, was a very different person, and of a more mature age, than a son of Ralphe Hore of Devonshire could then have been. Ralphe Hore, born in 1614, could not have had a son (much less the youngest son) old enough to have held the appointments in the Mint which James Hoare or Hore, the founder of the Bank, we well know did hold, and the dates of his appointments to such offices. Documents in my possession prove to a certainty who James Hoare was. He appears to have been a man of great energy, talent, and influence, to have inherited the chief remnants of the property of the Devonshire family, possessing house property in the city of Exeter, of which I have the counterpart leases, and to have advanced the interests of his family in every manner, and also to have assisted them greatly in their pursuits of life. It was he who was the principal means of obtaining for my own ancestor, Captain Edward Hoare, his next brother, and for Lieutenant Abraham Hoare, the grants of lands in the county of Cork, still in the family, and now the property of Sir Joseph Wallis O'Bryen Hoare, Baronet.

In addition to what I have before stated regarding the Golden Bottle, I must also add, I have seen another remark, in which it was called a knapsack or a pack, and with the statement, that the founder of the Bank, when he came first to London, carried in a pack on his back all he possessed in the world, and being afterwards successful in life, took such as his sign, in remembrance of former and other days. How true are the words of Pope: "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing!"—Then make it greater should be truer still!

In the 'Numismatic Chronicle' for the year 1874, New Series, will be found the account and balance-sheet of James Hoare, of his Majesty's Mint, for nine months of the years 1672 and 1673, with the Treasurer, Under-Treasurer, and Commissioners of the Treasury, James Hoare being then Comptroller of the Mint, and in which it will be seen that his brother Charles Hoare was then an officer in the Mint under him. This document was communicated by me to the Numismatic Society, as being of public interest, from the original document now in my possession, and which was James Hoare's counterpart of his account with the Treasury: it relates to the copper coinages of these years.

I find in several documents in my possession James Hoare and Richard Hoare as Joint Trustees. I find also Richard Hoare as Trustee to the Estate of Dame Elizabeth Neville, and her sister Mary Wakefield, daughters of James Hoare's second wife, by her first husband, as see at page 5. It relates to a mortgage on their property situated in the county of Essex.

When a young lad I often heard from old members of the family, and indeed I have also seen old family letters to the same effect, that there was a relationship between the Hoare Family of Edmonton and that of Oliver Cromwell. I have searched oftentimes to find any confirmation or proof of such, but in vain. I have never been able to trace the slightest relationship, or even any connection of the families. If there had been, it must only have been some very distant connection by marriage, but there certainly was not any blood relationship that I can discover.

PAGE 9.

A very slight error has occurred here (I hardly know how), in my description of Henricus Hore, the fifth son of William Hore of Risford, in Devonshire, and his wife Catherine Nott. I have stated that he married a Buckinghamshire lady, and settled at Walton in that county as an extensive farmer. I should have said it was his eldest son, Henry Hoare, who was the person who did so. It will, however, be seen all perfectly and correctly stated, in the account of that branch of the family, at page 44.

PAGE 12.

For the last ten years of his life, Sir Joseph Hoare, the first Baronet, and then M.P. for Askeaton, was totally blind, and by a resolution of the House of Commons, his grandson, Joseph Wallis Hoare, was allowed to sit alongside him, in order to take care of him. An absurd story, some silly gossip, got into print, that he lived in three centuries, having been born in December 1699, lived all through 1700, and died in December 1801. I have, however, clearly ascertained that he was born on the 25th December 1707, and died on the 24th December 1801, being then within one day of ninety-four years of age.

PAGE 14.

An error of a name has taken place here, which is certainly not my fault, as I took such as I have given from other publications. I have stated, as the second wife of William Jesse Hoare, of Carrigrohane Castle, county of Cork, Mary Gamble, eldest daughter and coheirress of Michael Gamble. I should have said, Mary Elizabeth Gamble, eldest daughter and coheirress of John Henry Gamble.

PAGE 43.

Willington Hall in Cheshire derives its name from some Druidical stones (so called), but more probably the remains of a Cromlech, and termed the "Willing Stones." They were stones of fate or destiny, situated on a rising hill, now I hear a fox cover, and were the seat of some priestcraft and delusions, no doubt for lucre, in these superstitious times. They were consulted before undertaking any enterprise, in order to ascertain whether the Gods or Fates were willing; hence they obtained the name of the "Willing Stones," corrupted afterwards to the "Willingtons," and now again changed to Willington Hall.

Henry Hoare, Esq., of London. The charities of this truly Christian gentleman were unbounded. Sir Richard Colt Hoare, in his Memoirs of the Families, gives a list of several of them, but they were reckoned only by thousands upon thousands. I find him presenting donations even to the charities of the city of Cork, and in a very scarce work, entitled "Pietas Corcagiensis," or "A View of the Green Coat Hospital, of Saint Mary's Shandon, in the Citie of Corke," printed in the year 1721, and of which I possess a copy, I find the following stated: "In March 1720, Henry Hoare, Esq., of London, was pleased to give Ten Guineas." This Hospital, still in existence, and to which the Hoare family have the right of presenting two boys, was founded in the year 1715, by a sum of money, left by will of Alderman Edward Hoare of Cork and Dunkittle, in 1709, for that purpose, and by donations from the Hoare and Newenham families. The Hospital building is situated in Saint Ann's Shandon Churchyard, called Upper Shandon, but belongs to Lower Shandon, which is Saint Mary's and Saint Catherine's Shandon. This shews that the intimacy of the families was then in existence, and kept up.

And now my task is finished, and my labour done! So let me at parting, and in conclusion, say, in the beautiful and expressive words of Southey, and of Byron:

"Go, little book, from this my solitude,
I cast thee on the waters, go thy ways!"

"And if as I believe thy vein be good,
The world will find thee after many days"— when all the different generations and the various persons here mentioned in these pages, and now alive, shall have passed away and gone to meet their predecessors in another and, let us hope, a better and a more enduring world! Farewell! Farewell!

EDWARD HOARE.
